

After graduating from the Faculty of Mechanical Engineering of Irkutsk State Technical University with a degree in Mechanical Engineering Technology in 1995, he worked at the Irkutsk Relay Plant as a process engineer. In the same year he entered the correspondence postgraduate school. In 2000, he defended his PhD thesis on the factory topic "Editing of low-rigid cylindrical parts by the method of lowercase surface plastic deformation".

In 2004 he was awarded the academic title of associate professor. He has a number of scientific and educational works, has repeatedly participated in scientific and practical conferences.

The direction of research is the correction and hardening of machine parts.